

ROULETTE

Roulette is a fun and simple game that provides exciting action. Players may wager on the number(s), combination of numbers or color they think the spinning ball will land on in the Roulette Wheel. Roulette offers a wide variety of bets: "straight-up" bets, (single number), "combination" bets, (splits and corners), "red or black," "odd or even" and others.

You play with your own individual color chips, good only at the table where they are issued. The value of these chips depends on the amount of your "Buy-In." You may also play the regular casino chips. Each betting cycle begins with the dealer spinning a ball in the opposite direction of the revolving roulette wheel head. Bets may be placed until the dealer announces "No more bets." When the ball comes to rest, the dealer marks the winning number, and all bets which correspond to this number are paid.

The exact placement of the chips determines the bet being made. Each player is responsible for the correct positioning of their wager on the layout.
